THE RIGHT TO CREATIVE EXPRESSION.

Creative Connections is a not-for-profit collective run by a team of volunteers including poets, parents of artists with complex needs, sector workers and community members. It is supported by organisations in the disability service sector and others.

Working with poets to achieve these aims has proved to be mutually beneficial.

Creative Connections believe art and poetry are important ways for people to express themselves creatively and we aim to give artists with complex needs the opportunity to do this while building their connection with the community and each other. We target this project to serve high-needs people with complex conditions, as it is felt that these people have the least amount of opportunity to express themselves creatively and to connect with the community.

THE ORGANISERS OF CREATIVE CONNECTIONS BELIEVE

01 art and poetry are important avenues for people to express themselves creatively.

02 artists with complex needs have the right to creative expression.

03 all people should be recognised for their ability.

04 avenues should exist for all members of the community to connect.

05 all people deserve to be treated equally with dignity, sensitivity and courtesy.

06 all people deserve respect and their knowledge, abilities and experiences should be valued.
